College Gift of $20,000 For Girls' Dormitory

W. J. Alford, Donor of Alford Memorial Gym. Makes Another Gift on Condition Like Amount is Raised.

The Twenty-Seventh annual commencement of Cedarville College was one unusual from those of the past, in that an Alumnus, Rev. Homer B. Henderson, pastor of the First United Presbyterian church, Detroit was the orator and an honored son, Mr. Wilbur D. Nisbet of Chicago, noted writer and after-dinner speaker, was present to make an address and favor the audience with some of his readings.

The events of the week opened Sabbath night when the annual baccalaureate sermon to the Seniors was delivered by President McChesney before an audience that completely filled the church. The Dr. took for his text "The Claims of Jesus Christ Upon You" from John 21:22. He stressed the facts that the claims of Christ are personal and reasonable and call for a substantial, sincere and simple profession of faith, followed up by an active, progressive life and in every one should take Jesus as the example in all that we do.

The members of the class entered and retired from the church with the processional and recessional. Misses Johnson and Oglebees sang a duet and Lucile Markle, a solo. Students formed the choir.

The annual class night performance was quite a theatrical success. The play "Come of of the Kitchen" gave the members ample opportunity to show their ability and training which was under Prof. Florence Somers.

Wednesday was the crowning event of the week for gaiety and sport. The day is always one waited for by the student body and community and it is safe in saying that 2000 or more persons were present to enjoy the program under Prof. Warner, athletic director. Miss Florence Smith was May Queen and Dorothy Oglebees, Woodland Queen. Miss Helen Stewart maid of honor to the queens. The flower girls were Rachel Harriman and Mary Jean Townsley and train bearers, Billy Aiken and Neil Hartman.

The work of Director Warner was never fully appreciated until the day events were staged. He had full charge of training the classes for the dances, drills and stunts. It is with much regret that he leaves the college and the public schools where his work speaks for itself.

Wednesday evening the Musical department held a recital at the college when the pupils under the direction of Miss Snow took part. Those who heard the program were much impressed with Miss Snow's work.

The annual meeting of the board of trustees was held Thursday when the new science hall was inspected. The building is regarded one of the most modern in Ohio and will be ready at the opening of college in September. The board announces a gift of $20,000 for a new girls' dormitory on condition that a like amount be raised to meet it. The building is much needed and the board appointed President McChesney and Dr. J. Alvin Orr a committee to personally confer with Mr. Alford, as to plans and details. Mr. Alford is now in Paris and will return shortly. Mr. Alford gave the Alford gym as a memorial to his father, 22 years ago. The new building will be erected on the site of the gym.

There will be several new members of the faculty next year. Miss Snow of the musical department has resigned and will be succeeded by Prof. J. A. Talcott of Bishop college, Marshall, Texas. Prof. Talcott will also have charge of athletics succeeding C. P. Warner, who has resigned to take up advance work at Illinois University. Miss Anna M. Tinker of Rose City, Pa., will take the position of instructor in English and French held by Miss Ethel E. Brand, resigned.

Rev. W. R. Graham of Lafayette, Ind., was chosen as a member of the board representing the Alumni.

The Alumni banquet to the Seniors was held Thursday evening in the parlors of the R. P. church. A three course dinner was served about 100 persons. Rev. James L. Chesnut of Covington, O., was toastmaster and welcomed the class into the organization. Mr. Earle Collins, president of the class, responded. The following responded to toasts: Rev. W. P. Harriman, '12; Mrs. Hazel Lowry Lansing, '14; Mr. Fred Bird, '10; Miss Alberta Creswell, '10; President McChesney.

Friday morning the commencement exercises were held in the gymnasium before a crowded house. It had been previously announced that Mr. Wilbur D. Nisbet of Chicago, who was to deliver the address, but was forced to decline owing to illness and the critical condition of his father. In his place Rev. Homer B. Henderson, pastor of the First United Presbyterian church, Detroit, was secured. Developments however enabled Mr. Nisbet to be present and he gave an informal address.

Rev. Henderson is a gifted speaker and his presence on the platform on commencement morning reminded us of the event years ago when he won honors for his literary society. He used as his theme: "God's Masterpiece or the Conditions of the Day You are just Entering." To the class he reminded them that they were in a day of things; a day when things are on the throne and driving at a furious pace. He warned the tendency of the times to regard life too cheaply for the sacredness of life was our greatest gift. He cautioned against the sin of lawlessness and that part of our break down of morals was the rush from the rural district to the crowded city. In America life is cheap but in the sight of God, man is God's masterpiece.

Mr. Nisbet in his address to the class brought out the home training and the influence of the church. He reviewed earlier events of boyhood days in comparison with advantages of today. Following the reading of several of his writings, which were highly appreciated, he mentioned that it was not the materialistic things we get out of life but the pleasures of friendships and he concluded by reading one of his favorite writings, "A Friend or Two."

THREE KS GIVE 100 TO JAMESTOWN CHURCH

The Ku Klux Klan in Jamestown has presented the Baptist church a gift of $100 to apply on the church debt. When a representative of the Klan marched into the church during service he left the check and afterwards was called upon to explain the working of the organization. The organization is evidently strong in that locality in Xenia alone there are up to a thousand members. At the last meeting of the Springfield Klan 1400 members were taken in at one time. Springfield is said to have between 12,000 and 15,000 members.

JUDGES SEE THINGS ENTIRELY DIFFERENT

Some days ago Police Judge Smith of Xenia stated that he would not send liquor violators to the Dayton work house as it was too easy to have prisoners liberated on the habeas corpus route. Judge Routzahn, of the Dayton Probate Court characterized such complaints as "the excuse those who do not know or do not follow legal procedure in conviction and commitment." Judge Smith had stated that hereafter all prisoners would be sent to the county jail.

RELIGION AND SCIENCE

The evolution controversy is causing no little division between leading ministers of most every denomination and comment is frequent in the press of the country. Church leaders are just awakening to the fact that all this contention is largely due to the discussion that William Jennings Bryan has given it, which can gain nothing for the church but much in a financial way for Bryan.

One of the strongest sermons on the religion and science controversy was reported Monday by the State Journal as delivered by Dr. Andrew Blackwood, pastor of the Indiana Presbyterian church, Columbus, one who is well known here.

Dr. Blackwood termed himself a "liberal conservative" and expressed belief that in dealing with matters relating solely to physical science, this class includes the "larger number of the leading ministers of our denomination and others."

William Jennings Bryan and Billy Sunday were described as being "not scholars and certainly not scientists." The opinion was advanced that "there is probably not a recent text book in biology, or a recognized university or college professor of physical science in America today, or in Europe, that would be satisfactory to Mr. Bryan or Mr. Sunday."

Dr. Blackwood recalled a list of conflicts between religion and science that has run down through the centuries in which the victory has almost without exception, rested with the scientists.

Pointing out the possible result of adopting a bitter attitude toward the teaching of modern sciences around which controversies hinge, Rev. Blackwood said: "I must remind you that we are in grave danger of alienating from the modern church the men and women who are doing most to determine the practical philosophy of the men and women of tomorrow."

"I know a university town where two churches stand near the campus. In one of them the pastor preached against the modern science, and then he wondered why the professors and the students passed by his door with a smile and went on to the church where the pastor did not preach science, but preached the sort of religion, which he found in the Bible. His hearers from the university thanked him for giving them something different from what they had in the laboratory six days in the week."

Rev. Blackwood pointed out that "whether we like it or not, the men and women of tomorrow are growing up in an atmosphere in which modern science is taken for granted." Elaborating on his statement that "men and women of tomorrow are growing up in an atmosphere where modern science is taken for granted," he said that "even in teaching history and English and philosophy our sons and daughters are using scientific methods. Some are not interested primarily in sciences," "But we are interested in our boys and girls. We do not believe that they can become the builders of a better world unless they have both education and religion. We think that the religion is the more important of the two, but we want them to have both. And we are glad that it is possible today more easily than ever before, to be a sincere Christian and also to be a modern scientist."

"One of the most brilliant and helpful preachers now living is Dr. H. J.

Jowett, formerly of the Fifth Ave. Church in New York. He never preaches about science, but he believes in it firmly. When a student in Edinburgh he fell under the sway of Henry Drummond, the theistic evolutionist, and whatever the world owes of inspiration to Dr. Jowett it owes in a large measure to the leadership of a man who went to his Bible for the truth about religion and to his laboratory for the truth about science. God's words never quarrel with his works."

HOW TO SAVE MONEY WHEN SHOPPING

By MRS. HARLAND H. ALLEN

(C. 1922, Harland H. Allen.)

PROBLEM OF SHRINKAGE

The question of shrinkage is an important one to the shopper. It is no little thing to lose 100 square inches out of a square yard, as sometimes happens when a flannel or other wool material returns from the tubs.

Wool materials especially present grave dangers from this source. They should always be shrunk before making up, otherwise they will not only felt and harden if laundered, but they will shrink the first time the garment is worn on a damp day, and will spot from rain.

The reason wool shrinks so badly is something like this: The fibers of wool, when seen under the microscope are composed of many little overlapping segments that are toothed and notched at the edges. When wet, these little notches open and expand, and then catch in one another and become tangled, thus causing felting and matting of the cloth. Often, even when the laundering is done as carefully as possible, the best wool garments will still shrink in daily wear just from the warmth, moisture and friction of the body. You notice this especially under the arms where sweaters and woollen garments are pretty sure to mat and thicken.

The average wool material shrinks from three-quarters to one inch to the yard. You can judge something about goods by outside appearances. For instance, those fabrics seem to shrink most which contain curly, rather than hairlike, wool fibers; that have a carded rather than a combed yarn; and in which the yarns lie close together in the weave. Colored wools are less apt to shrink, because of the thorough washing which precedes the dyeing, especially when they have been dyed in the cloth, instead of dyed in the wool.

Cotton goods will average one or two inches shrinkage to the yard. Some women shrink all cotton goods before making, but as this takes away some of the attractive "new look," many prefer to make their gowns larger than necessary just at first to allow for shrinkage. Linen cloth shrinks very little, though coarsely woven linen will stretch.

It is sometimes very convenient to be able to find out just how much the goods you contemplate buying will shrink. This can be computed by measuring the length and width of a sample, and then washing it with hot water and soap. First overcast the raw edges so there will be no loss of threads. Dry and iron without stretching. Measure again, and the loss gives the shrinkage.

Where They Were.
On inquiring why they made as much noise upstairs, the twins told me that they were just playing "war." Pretty soon the noise ceased, all war still; becoming uneasy at the unusual silence, I went upstairs to investigate; they were nowhere to be seen; but after calling several times and asking where they were, a still, small voice from under one of the beds answered: "We didn't tell, but we're somewhere upstairs."—Exchange.
